He Has Named the Parasite Agamomermic Cullets, and if It Can Be Propagated in Sufficient Numbers It Will Practi cally Exterminate the Mosquito Pest

WASHINGTON, July 12 .- Dr. Charles Wardell Stiles of the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service, discoverer of the parasite Uncinaria Americana, generally known as the hook worm, or "germ of laziness," and whose address last December before the Sanitary Conference of American Republics. in which he told of the effects of the ravages of the hook worm disease upon social, industrial and economic conditions in the Southern States, attracted such widespread attention, has made another discovery in the parasite world, which is considered by Government savants as of the greatest importance. This is the discovery and isolation of what Dr. Stiles has named the Agamomermis culicis, otherwise known as "the mosquito destroyer," a parasite which kills millions of mosquitoes each year and which, it is believed, under artificial propagation, will prove far superior to any means now known of ridding infested communities of

The discovery was not the result of accident or of haphazard methods. Some time ago the officers of the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service conceived the idea that at the present time, when mosquitoes are being subjected to such careful study because of the important relations they bear to public health, especially in connection with malaria, yellow ever and diseases of a like nature—the mosquito having been recognized as a carrier of fever germs-it was of the greatest interest to determine by what parasites they were naturally infested.

At the time this determination was made the health authortities were convinced, although without the backing of data, that the matter had a practical as well as a scientific value, for it was considered that it would make possible the elimination of certain nonpathogenic organisms from the life cycle of pathogenic organisms, certain stages of which were already known to exist in mosquitoes. It had a further practical bearing in that it was then believed that the parasites of mosquitoes might multiply to such an extent as to ecome important factors in their exter-

The experiments by Dr. Stiles, which followed this decision, have resulted in entire success. The parasite has been discovered and isolated. The right of the parasite to its common title of "mosquito destroyer" has been established. All that now remains to be done by Dr. Stiles and now remains to be done by Dr. Shes and his associates is to discover a rapid and inexpensive manner of propagating the parasites in sufficient number for general use in marshes, ponds and localities in-fested with the insects. The "mosquito destroyer" will do the rest. Certain forms of intestinal parasites had previously been found in mosquito larvæ n India, Italy and Spain, but none had been discovered in American mosquitos until Prof. John B. Smith of Rutgers College forwarded to Dr. Stiles for examination two worms taken from the abdominal cavity of New Jersey mosquitos. One specimen was hardly in a condition to be of use for study, but Dr. Stiles determined that both specimens were larval round-worms, belonging to the family mermithidae, either to mermis or paramermis. Dr. Stiles christened the parasite "agamo-

The agamomermis culicis is an interall parasite and has its habitat in the abdominal cavity of mosquitoes, infection taking place in the larval or pupal stages of the growth of mosquitos. Mosquitos infected with the parasite are sluggish in their movements and do not live long.

Female insects infected do not breed.

The researches which led up to the discovery of the parasite agamomermis culicis showed conclusively that what is generally termed "a bad year for mosquitoes"—that she was employed, was adopted, after when the pests are most numerous in their usual haunts, and even in places where they are usually few in number—is due to the existence of conditions unfavor- | stories the due to the existence of conditions unfavorable to the natural propagation of the "mosquito destroyer." Correspondingly, in years when the parasite breeds in large numbers, mosquitoes are not so troublesome. Indeed, from what has already been learned, it is apparent that, were it not for this natural enemy of the mosquito, the pests would breed unchecked in such numbers as to make certain sections of the country almost uninhabitable in certain country almost uninhabitable in certain periods of the year. It is admitted by Dr. Stiles and other

Government scientists that considerably more difficulty will be experienced in propa-gating the "mosquito destroyer" in suffigating the "mosquito destroyer" in suffi-cient numbers for general use than was involved in distributing the parasite of "the grasshopper plague" throughout the farming sections of the West. Although not generally known, it is, nevertheless, a fact that the Department of Agriculture, by sending out cultures of this plague to many points in the Middle West and South-west where formerly a general blight of west, where formerly a general blight of all crops from grasshopper hordes was no newly discovered parasite have proceeded as far, and the expense of propagating the "mosquito destroyer" has been reduced to the minimum, it is considered very possible that the Public Health and Marine Warning the contract of the minimum of the property of the contract of the c the United States.

It is interesting to note that the "mos-quito destroyer" belongs to the family of gordius or horsehair worms. It is no of gordius or horsehair worms. It is no uncommon thing to see thousands of these worms wriggling on plants, trees, shrubbery and on the earth, following a heavy storm, and it is this which has given rise to the common belief in rural districts that "it rains worms." As a matter of fact, however, these horsehair worms, like their more useful cousin, the "mosquitodistroyer," live in the abdominal cavities of various insects, and a long drought, followed by a heavy rain, usually results followed by a heavy rain, usually results in their leaving the bodies of insects and returning to the earth and to their first stage of existence. These species, how-ever, are not harmful to the insects which house them. The "mosquito destroyer" is deadly, but to mosquitoes only.

NATIONAL GALLERY OF ART. J. P. Morgan to Transfer His Collection to It and Erect One Wing.

WASHINGTON, July 12 .- A scheme for the establishment of a National Gallery of Art will be brought to the attention of Congress next winter. Already the scheme is credited with the indorsement of President Roosevelt, and several wealthy men have promised donations of money and paintings and other works of art.

According to an officer of the Corcoran Art Gallery of this city, J. Pierpont Morgan has indicated an intention to transfer his entire art collection to the proposed National Gallery. Contrary to all his former propositions, Mr. Morgan, it is declared, 29.70. akes no stipulation as to the location of the gallery, except that it shall be in Washington, and is willing also to contribute whatever amount of money may be neces-

The Board of Trustees of the Corcoran Art Gallery has informally decided not to accept the art collection left to the gallery by Mrs. Harriet Lane Johnston, who died at Narragansett Pier last week. Mrs. Johnston's will stipulated that the collection should he housed in a new building. To build this would cost, it is estimated, $100,000, and the value of the collection is said to be only about half that amount. Therefore the only about half that amount. Therefore the Board of Trustees is opposed to accepting the bequest. Among the artists represented in Mrs. Johnston's collection are Sir Joshua Reynolds, Sir Thomas Lawrence, George Romney, Sir William Beechy, Frans Bourbus the younger, Jansen, John Hoppner, Bernandine and Correggio. There are in the collection a number of portraits and busts of President Buchanan, and letters, portraits and models received by President Buchanan and Mrs. Johnston from the royal family of England. only about half that amount. OPPOSED TO CANAL TREATY. Member of Colombian Congress Gives His Views in Washington.

WASHINGTON, July 12 -Sefior Pede Velez, a member of the Colombian Congress arrived in Washington yesterday and will leave to-morrow for New York, whence he will sail on Tuesday for Colon. He was in conference last night and to-day with Dr. Thomas Herran, the Colombian Chargé d'Affaires, concerning the Panama Canal treaty, and much interest has been aroused over their discussion, on account of the possible effect it may have upon the treaty's chance. Señor Velez came Washington to lay before Dr. Herran the objections of himself and others to the treaty, with a view to securing Dr. Herran's arguments in favor of the measure. If Dr. Herran succeeds in offsetting the point made against the treaty the chances for the ratification of it may be greatly improved when Senor Velez gets back to Senor Velez said that while he was regarded as an opponent of the treaty he had been careful not to prejudice the case. His countrymen in general were opposed to the agreement with the United States, he said, because they thought this Government had not been generous enough in the terms offered, and the question of a trans-fer of sovereignty also caused much dissat-isfaction. The Colombian Government, he said, now received $250,000 annually from the Panama Railroad, and only this amount was offered by the treaty, while the uncompleted canal, which would revert to the Colombian Government if the French company fails to fulfill its contract, was worth as it stands more than the $10,000,000 offered by the United States for the canal, right of way, sovereignty and everything else. He expressed the belief that the treaty would not be passed upon at the present special session of the Colombian Congress which will come to an end on July 20, and that any decision before the end of August

FIRST WITH A POLICEMAN, THEN WITH WHITE NEIGHBORS.

olice Reserves Hunt the Roofs in West Sixty-second Street for Throwers of Bricks-Policeman on Post Furiously Pelted While Making an Arrest.

William Johnson, a stalwart negro, who lives at 238 West Sixty-second street, which is in the middle of the densely populated block between Amsterdam and West End avenues, was engaged at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon in a strenuous argument with several other negroes on the front stoop of the tenement house at 240. Policeman Benjamin O'Connor, whose thankless task it is to keep the white and colored residents of the block from fighting, warned Johnson that he was talking too much and too loud. He suggested that Johnson retire to his own house and keep quiet. There were a few words over whether Johnson would go home by himself or whether the policeman should escort him by the nape of the neck, the upshot of which was that the negro jumped at the policeman and the two rolled over on the sidewalk together.

When they reached the gutter the policeman was on top, with club drawn, and Johnson had nothing to do for the moment but submit. Following a time-honored custom of the block when any one is arrested, the residents took to the roofs on either side of the street, where for just such occasions bricks, stones, clubs and other missiles are kept handy. By the time O'Connor had yanked his man to his feet and started for the station house with him he bombardment began. A brick hit D'Connor on the shoulder, a club knocked his helmetoff, and a crowd of negroes who had gathered around the officer and his risoner seemed bent on freeing the latter.

Johnson began to fight for himself, and the crowd cheered him. O'Connor worked his way with his prisoner to the vacant lot on the north side of the street, near West End avenue, and Policemen Downey and Kelleher, who had adjoining posts, came to the rescue. O'Connor was then in a had way. From the tenemonts siding came to the rescue. O'Connor was then in a bad way. From the tenements siding on the open lot a storm of bricks and clubs had been thrown at him. Downey took a grip on Johnson's collar, and the three officers opened a way for themselves and their prisoner with their clubs.

In West End avenue a crowd of white men belonging to the element in the neighborhood who carry on a constant warfare with the blacks tried to get Johnson away from the policemen. They told the officers that they would hang him to a lamp post, and made other cheerful threats which they didn't mean. After a good deal of trouble the policemen got their man to the trouble the policemen got their man to the station house, where he was locked up on a charge of disorderly conduct.

The arrest of Johnson meanwhile, had stirred up the neighborhood. Negroes who ventured around into West End and Eleventh avenues were assaulted, and white men who came up on the Sixty-second street block were greeted with showers of brickbats from the roofs. When the three policemen returned to the block they were greeted with a rain of stones. The block was in such a turmoil that the reserver from the Sixty-eighth street, station, the Forty-seventh street station and the Wes 100th station were sent for. About twenty policemen scurried up to the roofs of the ouses to catch some of the stone throwers. They got one man, William Brocket of 222 West Sixty-second street

DELAY ON NEW CROTON DAM. Can't Be Finished in October, 1904—Exact Cost Six and One-half Millions.

The Aqueduct Commissioners, in a report they have prepared for Mayor Low showing the work still to be done on the new Croton Dam, admit that it is impossible to say when the aqueduct will be finished. They say that owing to the changes suggested in the original plans by the expert enigneers who were appointed to examine the construction of the dam, because of the discovery of the insecure foundation of the core wall at the south end and owing to the delays caused by the labor difficulcompleted by Oct. 1, 1904, the time fixed in the contract. It is impossible to fix any date for the final completion of the dam, "until a sound foundation is reached in the excavations now being made."

In another report accompanying that of the Commissioners, signed by Chief Engineer W. R. Hill (since resigned), describing the necessity for removing the core wall and embankment and substitutions. ing for it a masonry structure, it is stated: In order to secure a stable and impervious foundation it has been necessary to excavate to a much greater depth than the base of the core wall. Since March this work of exto a much greater depth than the base of the core wall. Since March this work of excavation has been in progress, and a proper foundation has not yet been reached. It has been found, however, by digging test pits, that the rock appears somewhat harder at a depth of about fifty feet below the base of the core wall, but the depth to a proper foundation is not yet determined. This additional depth will increase the quantities of excavation and masonry, as well as delay the completion of the work, but it is impossible at this time to determine the extent. The base of the dam widens about a foot in each additional foot of depth, thus making it necessary to excavate to a greater width than was at first anticipated. By reason of this condition there is danger of undermining a portion of the adjacent old Croton Aqueduct. To overcome this contingency it will be necessary to excavate along the foundation of the aqueduct and build a supporting retaining wall to prevent it from sliding into the excavation. The rock under the adjoining gate-house is considerably broken up or shattered, and has many open seams, and while it might be sufficiently stable for a firm foundation, still it is not imprevious to water. Therefore, in order to prevent water from escaping from the reservoir under the gatehouse it may be necessary to excavate for and build a wall along its upstream side. The extent of this wall can only be determined by further excavation. However, it may be necessary, in case of adverse developments, to remove and rebuild the gatehouse, which is only constructed to half its finished height.

Mr. Hill estimates that the increased cost. of carrying out the additional work neces-

Mr. Hill estimates that the increased cost of carrying out the additional work neces-sary on both the Croton Dam and the Jerome Park reservoir will be at least $6,700,000, of which $6,418,000 will be required for the new work on the Croton Dam.
